Give Students a Place to Practice Before Opportunity Depends on It

The GradPlanHQ Practice Field gives students a place to practice professional behaviors, contribute, and gradually take on greater responsibility alongside the courses, services, programs, and relationships institutions already provide.

Three Jobs the Practice Field Is Designed to Support

Expand Access to Professional Practice
Give more students opportunities to practice professional behaviors, not only students who secure internships or already know how to navigate professional settings.

Create Pathways to Increasing Responsibility
Students can start with lower-stakes professional practice or move toward meaningful contribution and substantive work when that is what they need.

Get More Value From Systems Already in Place
Help students build from coursework, Career Services, student involvement, research, service, alumni, employers, community partners, and relationships already available to them.

The Practice Field

Students can bring work they're already doing or begin something new. They can practice at lower stakes, contribute to useful work, or take on greater responsibility when they're ready.

Growth Cycle
Connect. Build. Grow. Repeat.

Action & Momentum Meetups
Protected time. Support. Momentum.

Community App
People, feedback, and professional reps between Meetups.

Optional Project Launchers
Structured, skill-focused projects that can be organized quickly.

Build on What You Already Have

Courses · Career Services · Student Involvement · Research · Service · Alumni · Employers · Community Partners

GradPlanHQ is designed to complement the people, programs, relationships, and opportunities already available to students rather than require another heavy institutional structure.

Start Small

One course · One cohort · One pilot · One department · One program

Start small. Expand what proves useful.
